On Tuesday next Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana elect members to the next Congress, and State Legislators, as well as some State Officers. On the 4th of November New York and several other States hold elections for the same purpose. The contest is between the Republican and Democratic parties. Both are for sustaining the Union and the Government in putting down the rebellion; but they differ widely in the means for that purpose. The Democrats propose to defeat the armies of the rebels, and execute the laws of the United States. The Republicans, however, have other expedients, which they consider will be immensely effective. They think general confiscation of all the property of the rebels would do wonders in the way of putting down the rebellion. They think the prospect of losing property in this way will scare the rebels into fits. They also insist that the slaves must all be set free, and are mighty on proclamations to that effect. They gloat over the prospect of servile insurrections, and flatter themselves that the rebels are all shivering in their boots at the prospect; that the rebel soldiers are filled with consternation, and ready to run home to protect their families. They would rejoice at a St. Domingo in the South, which some of them hint plausibly the expectation of accomplishing. Some of their leaders say out boldly that the rebellion will never be put down without the help of the negro. In fact, these partisans don't care so much about the Union, so they can abolish slavery and hold the offices; or at any rate so adjust the master that they will not lose power.

On this programme, after the rebellion is over, a great deal worse than the rebellion will come up, and that is the negro question. There is a straightforward way to deal with rebellion. Break its power by force of arms and it is done; but what can be done with the free negro, is a question that no statesman or financier yet born can solve.

We do not say that this distinction applies to every individual of the parties in question; but it is fairly the general distinction between them. The border States on this side of the line will look with deep interest at the result. The vote that day will count more than a battle. In the contest there is the usual amount of trash and mendacity, which is none of our business. We have faith in the millions of white men that they will be sensible at last.

Lieut. J. E. Cassel, of the Seventy-seventh Pennsylvania Volunteers, reached this city this morning. He reports a serious mishap. Captain Bowles, Gen. Sill's Division Quartermaster, was ordered to report at Frankfort with his train. He left Louisville on the 7th, with Major Bradford, in command of about forty convalescents.

They got within twelve miles of Frankfort on the 9th, and learned it was in possession of the rebels, and that Sill's division had taken the road to Salt river, through Lawrenceburg. They reached Lawrenceburg about eight o'clock, and pressed on toward Salt river, encamping at night in an open field about one mile from Salt river.

At day light they were attacked by a party of the enemy. Major Bradford held the attacking party in check, whilst the train moved on half a mile. The rebels were re-enforced by about 600 cavalry, and Kirby Smith's whole army appeared on the opposite bank of the river. A surrender was necessary. A flag of truce was carried by Lieutenant Baily, and answered by Gen. Gray.

By this misfortune we lost seventeen Government wagons and their contents, and some ten or fifteen sutler's wagons.

The enemy had captured 551 stragglers from Sill's division, whom they sent back to the train.

The officers captured were Colonel Dunn, Thirtieth Indians; Major Bradford, Seventy-seventh Pennsylvania; Capt. Bowles, Quartermaster; Lieut. Baily, Thirtieth Indians; Lieut. J. E. Cassel, Seventy-seventh Pennsylvania; Lieut. Goldsmith, Thirtieth Ohio.

It seems marvelous to us that our authority can't know a little better where the enemy is, and can't avoid sending a train to him for his special accommodation; and, further, that there is no regard of a division to keep stragglers in their places.

AS OLD DOCUMENT.—"This is to certify that the bearer, by the name of James, has done essential service to me while I had the honor to command in this State. His intelligence from the enemy camps were industriously collected and most faithfully delivered. He properly acquitted himself with some important commissions I gave him, and appears to me entitled to a large reward as his situation can admit of."

"Done under my hand. Richmond, Nov. 21, 1784.

LAFAYETTE."

We take this from a fac-simile of the certificate, furnished by friend. He knew the negro James in Richmond long afterward. He had obtained his freedom, and was supported for the service he had rendered. Many of James' race make good spies, and the Confederates are, no doubt, indebted to them for much of their information.

A CORRESPONDENT of the New York World would not be surprised if the war was ended by Christmas. We should not be surprised if it were or were not. Nothing would surprise us these times, unless Abolitionists and Secessionists should become honest, sensible men.

ILLINOIS has raised one hundred and thirty-nine thousand troops, of all descriptions, for the war. Eighteen regiments are in the State awaiting orders.

The dying injunction of the immortal Douglas to his sons was: "Tell them to be responsible for the silver ware." (Great laughter.)

(For the Louisville Democrat.)

The guerrillas are very busy down on the border "sowing the wind." Not long ago they stole a drove of cattle in Clinton and Wayne counties and started them South. The day before their expected arrival in Fenwick, Sinker, D. Batty and his men blockaded the road by piling brush and bending bushes across. They then secreted themselves and waited their coming. The cattle came to the brush and stopped, and while the drivers were urging them forward, Batty's men amused themselves shooting at them. The first discharge brought down six. This was more than the thieves had bargained for, and they left in haste, leaving their dead and the cattle to shift for themselves.

A little over two weeks ago they gathered them again, and started towards Sparis, taking the Monroe road. When they arrived at Wolf river they were fired on again, one of their men wounded and one killed. The tories immediately put fire to H. Lehman's house, barns and other buildings, and set the sides of the hill afire. They then crossed over, fired his barns, storehouses, mills, dwelling, and other outbuildings, and about two hundred thousand feet of lumber in stacks.

They next surrounded Esquire Donardy's, about half a mile above, ordered on his family, and set fire to his house, not allowing anything to be removed.

They next burned Jack Zachery's dwelling and the widow's. "Mother," said one of the little children, "what are we to stay now?" she said they would build a small cabin and stay in that. "Not a bit of it," said the female. "If you or any of your family are here in ten days we will burn you like we have the houses." She told them she had nowhere else to go and nothing to go with.

They next burned Robert Clayburn's and the widow Dixon's dwellings and all their contents. Towards midnight they visited Dacon Flower's dwelling, ordered his wife out of bed who had been confined only a few months, and took her pack out all their household goods. Intended to burn the house, but changed their minds leaving her with the assurance that they would be home shortly and burn all they had.

NOTICE TO OWNERS OF PROPERTY.
ARKANSAS HERKES.—A letter from our correspondent at Helena contains some very readable extracts from a rebel mail lately captured in Arkansas. The letters show curious state of poverty, hunger and demoralization among the rebels, and reports sent from that State. The Fourteenth regiment may, perhaps, be taken as a sample. It had up to the 22d of August, been reduced by disease, desertion, &c., to two hundred and fifty-five men, "eighty-two of them without shirts, ninety-six without shoes, and thirty-eight without hats." We should like to see that corps of Arkansas warriors on dress parade! No doubt Falstaff, who was proud of his recruits, that had only a shirt and a hat to the whole command, would have been pleased to see the condition of the Fourteenth.

All draws from lots or houses to be covered under the sidewalks in iron pipes, in accordance with the ordinance regulating the same; the said work, when executed, to be received by the City Engineer, and if not done in every respect in accordance with specifications regulating sidewalk paving, to be repaved at the expense of the property owners.

To recruit and repave the unpaved portions of the sidewalks on both sides of Preston street, from Walnut to Madison.
